Excellent service with the navy and army abroad has not dulled the playing of some of the American tennis stars, judging from recent English comment about the racquet work of certain players at the Queens club, London. The speed and skill of at least one young American has been compared favorably with that of the great Maurice McLaughlin and the coming from an English writer critic leaves nothing to be desired in this direction.

The complimentary comment arose as the result of the playing of a tourney at the Queens club, London, which attracted, besides Americans, a number of star players from many of the allied countries. One of the contests was between teams picked from the British and American navies on one side and from the British and American armies on the other. Admiration of the American navy and general Biddle of the American army were present. The contest, which was won by the army combination, 13 to 12.

Two Americans, Ensigns F. T. Hunter and Hird of the United States navy, returning all their matches, and their work, particularly Hunter's, excited the admiration of the crowd. London sport experts compare them to McLaughlin. One wrote in a morning paper:

"What could have been better than the terrific service of Ensign Hird, whose right with Anthony Wilding at Wimbledon will be equally recalled. Hunter got his place on a different way from what McLaughlin used to do. There was not all that flourish in the backhand swing. The intense pace came from foreplay and wrist. He came from a straight left, and as a rule his second service was just as terrible as the first. The service of Hunter was the great stunt of the afternoon."

Word comes from France that Grover Cleveland Alexander, the star pitcher, hasn't lost his skill. Alexander recently pitched for his regimental team, the 342d field artillery, against the reputed champions of the American army "over there," and secured a 3 to 0 victory. The big right hander was in great form and allowed only one hit, which was made in the ninth inning by one of the "over there" players. The game was won by the regiment in honor of which the Y. M. C. A. gave a banquet after the game.

Persons who believed the reports that Frederick Ban Johnson of the American league had lost the support of owner C. A. Conkley of the Chicago White Sox will be surprised to learn that these old war horses are enjoying a hunting trip together in the Wisconsin woods. Johnson and Conkley have had a number of preliminary quarrels, but they are enjoying a hunting trip together in the Wisconsin woods. Johnson and Conkley have had a number of preliminary quarrels, but they are enjoying a hunting trip together in the Wisconsin woods. Johnson and Conkley have had a number of preliminary quarrels, but they are enjoying a hunting trip together in the Wisconsin woods.

George Bonhag, former national A. A. U. distance champion, will shortly take up duties as director of athletics at the aviation camp at Lincoln, N. D. Bonhag has received the commission as lieutenant in aviation from the war department and expects to take up his new duties next week. The former champion runner and athlete is one of the greatest runners in the game. He has a wonderful stride and endurance. John D. Couch, who once pitched for the Detroit Tigers, is now a lieutenant. Couch has graduated from the officers' training school at Camp Fremont, Cal., and has received his commission.

BASEBALL MAGNATES FACE KNOTTY PROBLEM

New York, Oct. 9.—Major league baseball magnates face a knotty problem at the coming annual meetings when they will be called upon to decide the status of the player at the end of the season. Very few of the club owners hold the opinion, apparently, that it will be possible to resume league operations next spring. If such proves to be the case and there are few indications to the contrary, it would appear that the majority of players who figured in the 1918 pennant races will not receive contracts during the early months of next year.

According to the present system it is mandatory upon the clubs to renew their options or reserve clause upon players not later than Jan. 1 each year and to follow this action by making contracts to the players not later than Feb. 11. It is extremely doubtful if this procedure will be followed in 1919. Under the ordinary ruling a player who did not receive his contract by March 1 would become a free agent and upon the resumption of big league baseball would be in a position to sell his services to the highest bidder. However, that the magnates will hold that the business of baseball was suspended under instructions from the government and since the right to operate was beyond their control all contracts and legal phases are suspended automatically. Under this construction the contract of the player carries over until such time as the government gives consent for a renewal of the business of baseball. This if the professional leagues do not resume until 1919 the year 1919 would be considered as non-existent in so far as it might effect a player's contract.

There is still another angle to the proposition which involves the magnates and the two major leagues as individuals and co-operating business organizations. It might be held to be within their rights to refuse to negotiate with or for the services of a player who, previous to the suspension of the game, was the property of another club. If such action were actually adopted the player would be obliged to report back to his original club for a renewal of his contract or a release, if he desired to re-enter play in either of the big leagues.

From my knees down they were covered with scales, and itched and burned as though hot coals were resting on them. I would scratch until the blood came, and was unable to sleep at night. Nothing that I tried helped me until a druggist recommended Resinol Ointment. After applying it once, I enjoyed the first good night's sleep I had had in weeks. Now I am sound and well after using a little over one jar of Resinol Ointment. (Signed) R. B. Price, 414 Downey St., Indianapolis, Ind.

LANGUAGE ASCRIBED TO FISH

Men of the Sea Have Their Own Idea of Articulation Peculiar to Their Catch.

There is a belief among fishermen that a herring, when caught, articulates a sound similar to the word "cheese." This sound is caused by an escape of air from the air bladder, or a movement of the gills. Fishermen, indeed, frequently state that the herrings "sneeze," just as Aristotle once said that gurnards "grunt."

The gurnard was known to the Greeks as "lyros" and "ococyx," apparently from the noise it was said to make.

Many fish have various forms of utterance attributed to them. On the Norfolk Broads, one often hears it said that an old jack pike has barked like a dog, and the same is said of the conger eel.

Red-finned herrings, called "loaders" or "kings and queens," are sometimes caught; they are regarded as an omen of a successful fishing. One of them is then taken out of the nets very carefully, prevented from touching anything made of wood, and passed round the scudding pots as many times as the fishermen desire to get lots of herrings at the new haul.

How the Dutch Lost New York.
The first step toward making New York an English colony was taken 250 years ago, when Charles II granted to his brother, the duke of York, a large territory in America, to be called, in honor of the proprietor, New York. This included the Dutch settlement of New Amsterdam and the "colony" of New Netherland, with Col. Richard Nicolls in command, to be deputy governor.

The Dutch settlers decided that it was useless to argue the case with the English invaders, "who were six times their number," and in the autumn of 1664 Fort Amsterdam and Fort Orange were surrendered. The name of New Amsterdam was changed to New York and that of Fort Orange to Albany. Governor Stuyvesant swore allegiance to Charles II, but soon returned to Holland. New Amsterdam, founded over three centuries ago, had at the time of the English conquest a population of 1,500, while the total population of the province was about 10,000.

14 YEARS OF LABOR ENTITLES MAN TO A REST
[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.]
Seattle, Oct. 8.—John Wirtot, a Russian, was before Judge Gordon here and this is how it happened: Judge Gordon—"Why don't you go to work?"

Wirtot—"I am taking my first vacation in fourteen years."

Gordon—"Have you any money?"

Wirtot—"Oh, a few thousands. For instance, I have $1,000 on deposit at the First National bank. That represents a portion of my savings. I thought I was entitled to a rest after working steadily for fourteen years, but this position evidently thought I was entitled to arrest."

Judge Gordon dropped the case and shoofed Wirtot out of the court room.

ALLIED SOLDIERS SIGHTSEEING IN RECAPTURED TERRITORY

Soldiers gazing at Chateau-Thierry.

This American official photo shows how Chateau-Thierry looks since it was retaken from the Hun. French and American soldiers are getting a good view of the town. The ruin wrought in the town during the German advance and when the Huns were driven out of the city in the great allied offensive is not very apparent, but wherever German shells struck buildings and even sections of streets were laid low. Note the ruined tower in the center of the picture.

ROCK COUNTY HAS BUILDING COMMITTEE

M. P. Richardson Heads New Building Committee of Rock County. People Asked To Cooperate With Committee.

The War Industries Board has asked the State Council of Defense and its representatives to assist in passing upon proposed construction in order that all building that is not absolutely necessary may be stopped. This is part of a plan of the War Industries Board by which permits must be secured for construction projects, shipping of lumber, etc.

Rock County has now a Building Committee of which M. P. Richardson is chairman. Identical with this general committee in the county are sub-committees in the various communities of the county. This organization of these sub-committees is in process and the personnel will later be announced.

The State Council of Defense, in a recent communication to the local committee, states that it could be unnecessary to remind the people that this nation is at war, and that all other conditions must be subordinated to the needs of the government in winning the war, and in mobilizing all the resources of the country against the forces of the enemy. This can only be accomplished through the strictest economy in war materials, labor, fuel, and transportation. The government has asked that wherever possible with safety to public interests, all building construction of non-war character be deferred until after the war.

It may be difficult to see the connection between the building of a building and the war, but the furnishing of supplies for the battle front. Nevertheless there is such a connection, and supplies for the man "over there" cannot be furnished unless there is a curtailment of the use of the materials and labor in this country.

To stop all building that is not absolutely necessary, the government has put into operation the following plan of procedure:

1. The person interested in a construction project will apply with full statement of the facts under oath to the appropriate local representative of the State Council.

2. The local representative of the State Council will then investigate the necessity of the proposed construction and transmit its recommendation, with a story of the facts, to the State Council for review.

3. The State Council, or its appropriate committee will review the case.

Some exceptions are made to the rule which is an addition or alteration to any building not to exceed in cost $2,500.00, but a series of repairs or extensions will not be permitted. Also persons desiring to erect farm buildings for the housing or conservation of food or stock may do so where the cost of the project does not exceed $1,000.00. It is pointed out, however, that it is a serious offense to pursue a course proceeding with any building whatsoever, to consult with the local committee and until the sub-committee are fully organized, Mr. Richardson should be consulted.

Dr. McClellan, Chief of Non-War Construction Section, Priorities Division, War Industries Board, states in a communication that it is unnecessary to remind the people that this nation's business is war, and all other considerations must be subordinated to the paramount purpose of winning the war. He says among other things: "The public interest cannot be deferred. It concludes: 'If we can have shells enough in France next year, we can blast a path to Berlin. To the extent that we fall behind in the supply of material, we shall have to make up the deficit from the living bodies of our young men. This is not rhetoric. It is cold, precise military calculation.'

Following a praise service Tuesday evening, an address was given by Rev. Herman Swartz, D. D. of New York city on the subject, "Good things come to those who wait." The speaker had some unique ideas on the subject, claiming that giving is an expression of spiritual life, like prayer, and should be performed frequently. He advocated that every member of the church should give. Giving should be every week and not once a year.

Dr. Hitchcock of Chicago, national secretary of the American foreign mission board, spoke on the subject, "The Call to Christianize a War-Swept World." It was the opinion of the speaker that the fundamental spiritual realities, justice, humanity, and recognition of the rights of the weak were emphasized by the war. Dogmatism and formalism, the Kaiser's dream of a world empire are fading away, while Islam is disintegrating. All that has contributed to the welfare of mankind will be saved, because no big guns can shoot real things to pieces.

BRIDE of BATTLE

A Romance of the American Army Fighting on the Battle-fields of France.

by VICTOR ROUSSEAU

Copyright, 1918, by W. G. Chapman. And over her head stare saw the tall figure of Kellerman in the doorway.

The recognition was mutual and instantaneous. Kellerman's surprise was changing into a sneering challenge when Eleanor turned, saw the newcomer, and, with a superb effort of will, smiled at him.

"So I see you got here, Sister Howard," said Kellerman, with a forced laugh.

"Just in time," answered the girl. "Have you come to order us all up to the trenches?"

"Some of you, but not the ladies. No, I'm attending the General on his tour of inspection of the lines."

The talk grew indistinct as they drifted away. Mark, staring after them in a stupor, saw Kellerman nod toward him, and fancied that the girl made a gesture of pleading.

Neither had noticed him. He reflected savagely that already Eleanor was coming to take his status for granted, as the other sisters did.

CHAPTER XI.

By evening the rush of work had died down, and the orderlies, save those on duty, were given the customary leave.

Leave meant Elaples, with its comfortable little inn, the chatty landlady and her pretty daughter.

Mark strode toward Elaples. He had an intense longing for the lights and comfort of the little inn. But he had not gone more than a hundred paces when Hartley hailed him.

"Going into Elaples?" he asked. "Do you mind my going with you?"

"Frankly, yes, Hartley," answered Mark. "You won't mind my saying so? I want to be alone after this."

"I know, old man," said Hartley, drawing back. "Sorry if I bothered you."

But Mark swung round on him. "Hartley, answer me one question," he said. "What has Miss Howard ever had to do with you? Why have you been watching her for six or seven years?"

Hartley began to walk along the road at Mark's side. He made a curious quivering sound before he answered. "Has it occurred to you, Mark, that the Kenson woman has been operating in Washington for a good time now?" he asked.

"I suppose so," Mark answered. "You know everything was prepared for years before the war began. The system had ramifications in every department of the government. You know Colonel Howard was in touch with it as far back as the Cuban war?"

"Good Lord, yes, but—"

"And a man is only a pawn in such a game. Good God, don't question me, Mark! I've been a tool of hers, but I'll swear that I never worked against the government. I learned little by little of the whole accursed nest of spies. I obeyed their orders because—well, I can't tell you now—but I worked against them too. I've done them more harm than good. I had my motives—selfish ones, despicable, perhaps; but I was never a traitor. Good God, Mark, haven't you seen how your faith in me has begun to make a man of me?"

Mark took Hartley's hand and gripped it. It was the best and the only possible answer. In their tacit understanding they went on toward the inn together.

Outside the inn they saw an auto, with a soldier chauffeur in charge. Hartley gripped Mark's arm.

"Do you know what that is?" he whispered. "Kellerman's!"

The landlady came to the door. "Bonsieur, messieurs," she said smiling. "This way tonight, if you please."

She led them round by the side, into the kitchen, where they found half a dozen privates drinking light wine and teasing the landlady's daughter as she served them.

There was nothing in this to the men; they were often turned out of the dining room-parlor when officers put in an appearance. But this was Kellerman! Mark looked at Hartley and saw intense excitement on his face, which he was trying most evidently to restrain.

He ordered beer of Annette, and followed her toward the outhouse in which the liquor was stored. The girl was a friend of his, perhaps because, more serious than the rest, he treated her with less badinage than was customary among the soldiers. As she moved out of the lighted room into the shadows outside the merriment fell like a mask from her face.

"What is it, Annette?" asked Mark. "Ah, monsieur, it is tragic!" said the girl, pausing at the outhouse door. "She is one of my countrywomen. The accent is of the south, or some outlandish part, but she is French—and she has come a long way to meet him, and he will not have anything to do with her. How did she get through the lines?"

"Who, Annette?"

"The lady with the American officer. Listen, monsieur! Listen, then!"

"They were standing in front of the outhouse, which was set near an angle of the old-fashioned building between the parlor and the kitchen. They could hear the impinging voices of the woman, and the subdued answers of Kellerman."

Then, elusive against the dark angle of the building, Mark perceived Hartley. He was standing under the high sill of the window, in such a way that Mark thought he could see through the chink between the sill and the lower edge of the blind. Eavesdropping as he evidently was, Mark felt that something justified his presence there.

Annette perceived him at the same moment. She started, and then shrugged her shoulders.

"Eh bien, monsieur, it is their affair!" she said lightly, and went into the outhouse. She was too wise to interfere with her customers. Mark hardly noticed her departure. He was watching Hartley.

Suddenly the door opened and the woman came down the steps that led into the little vineyard behind the inn. She raised her heavy veil to dab a handkerchief at her eyes, and at that moment Mark recognized Mrs. Kenson.

He remained rooted to the ground in astonishment. But it was more than that; he felt suddenly trapped, as if the woman's presence there was vitally connected with his own problems, as if he were the victim of some far-reaching scheme with which he could not grapple.

A minute later Kellerman appeared and stood upon the step above her, looking into her upturned face with his habitual sneer.

"It is all over then?" asked Mrs. Kenson.

"Since you compel me to be frank—yes," answered Kellerman. "It has been over for years, Ada. To think that you should have put us all in this danger! You haven't told me how you got here, or how you sent me that message."

"How I got here? Does that matter? Well, I came up in a peasant woman's dress, as one of the repatriated. I sent you the message through a boy, who knows nothing—his wife was thrashed out of him by the Germans. He left the note—he won't trouble you. And I suppose now I'm to go back."

"Suddenly she broke into a shrill invective. 'I'm to go back, after the thousands of miles that I came, because you are the only man in the world who has ever meant anything to me! I gave my life to you. How many years have you played with me? Answer me! And now you fling me from you as if I were nothing, because of—oh, do you suppose I haven't heard of that? But take care! I can be dangerous when I am aroused, and I see now—I see clearly now, if never before!'"

Mark's blood seemed to freeze as he listened. He had unconsciously drawn near Hartley.

"You are talking wildly, Ada," muttered Kellerman. "Are you going to ruin everyone? Do you want to hang? For you will, Ada. There's no sentimentality in war. Now I'm going to do the riskiest thing I ever did. I'm going to take you back behind the lines in my auto. By a miracle of good luck I have the password for the night. Come! And we'll talk over matters on the drive back!"

"Come, Ada!" said Kellerman; and then he turned sharply and confronted Mark.

For an instant he ooth as if transfixed; then, with an oath, he leaped at him and struck him a blow in the face that sent him reeling backward.

Ada Kenson turned and ran toward Mark with a scream. She did not recognize him, Mark could see that.

The discipline of a lifetime held Mark steady. He stood confronting Kellerman, but did not raise a hand even to guard himself. Kellerman glared at him in speechless fury. And even then it seemed a little singular to Mark that Hartley disappeared, so swiftly and silently that neither the man nor the woman knew he had been there.

Then Kellerman burst into hysterical laughter.

"It's the spy from the war department," he cried. "The fellow we pitched out of the army for treachery, masquerading here in uniform. A blank wall and a firing squad for you tomorrow, my man!"

Ada Kenson sprang between them. "He doesn't mean that!" she cried, peering into Mark's face dubiously. She recognized Mark now, but Mark could see that the recognition meant little to her; probably he had been only a trivial incident in her career. "Listen to me!" she whispered in Mark's ear. "He has been drinking. It will be all right. Just go back and keep this to yourself. You'll get a fifty-dollar bill by the next post, and ten every month afterward, so long as you don't see anything. Understand? He isn't responsible."

Mark turned away in disgust, but he imagined the warped mind that caught at this hope of secrecy.

He went back into the kitchen. The soldiers were still there, one or two filled him; the incident had occupied only ten minutes. Annette made a little mouth at him from the doorway. But Mark was searching in the room for Hartley.

"Your friend went home, I think, monsieur le soldat," said Annette in banter.

Mark strode out of the inn without a word. Hartley's disappearance did not disturb him. Hartley was strange; but he felt that he had relied too much on Hartley. It was for him to act. He would go to the Major in charge of the hospital, tell his story, and do the only thing possible. He had no doubt any longer that Kellerman and the Kenson woman were partners in a far-reaching conspiracy against his country, though he had never before allowed himself to accept the obvious deductions from the Washington episode. His mind moved slowly. His purpose had been to redeem himself, he had thought Hartley obsessed; now he meant to reveal everything.

And suddenly, out of the mist of years, he recalled Colonel Howard's story of Hampton. Kellerman had been the chief agent in Hampton's tragic fall. Suppose Hampton had been innocent! Suppose that Eleanor's father had been a brave and loyal man, whose hideous ruin and abominable death might be posthumously vindicated?

The blood rushed to his head at the thought of it. The burden of the knowledge of her father's shame, and of its probable effect on her if ever she learned had weighed heavily upon Mark's heart since that night in the tent in Cuba.

Then the blood receded, leaving him as cold as a stone. For he recalled Ada Kenson's words to Kellerman. So the hunter was hard upon the quarry—perhaps he had already snared her. Eleanor had liked Kellerman. He forced back his thoughts, strode straight to barracks and turned in.

Dinner Stories.

Strange things, considering the surroundings, are asked for by our soldiers in France of the women running the Y. M. C. A. canteens. Eloise Robinson in a description of a typical morning at the "Y" tells the following:

"A South Carolina negro steps up to the counter, asking: 'Yo-all got some complexion cream this mornin', ma'am?' They are placed before him. He carefully reads the labels and selects the larger jar. 'Anything else?' 'Yassam. Some face powder, please, ma'am.'"

The caddy was brought before the magistrate for using violent language to a lady.

"But she ain't no lady," he protested, fiercely.

"Indeed," quoth his worship. "And do you know a lady when you see one?"

"Of course I do," indignantly answered the man. "Why, only the other day I saw one—she give me a parrot note for a shilling, fire and walked away. 'I, man,' I calls, 'what about yer change?' 'Don't be a blinkin' old fool!' ses she; 'keep it, and git drunk enough to kiss yer mother-in-law.'"

"Now, yer worship," he ended, triumphantly, "that's what I calls a real lady."

The gentleman with long hair and a sort hat was negotiating with the lady who let apartments.

"Might I ask you, sir," she said,

Grocer Up Against It

"I have been up against it for past 3 years suffering from pain in my stomach and side until I was considering giving up my grocery business. I heard of May's Wonderful Remedy through a friend in Buffalo. The first dose gave me more benefit than all the medicine I had taken before and am now feeling as well as ever in my life." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. J. P. Baker, Druggist.

"What is your occupation?" "Well," he said, "it would be rather difficult to define; but I may say that I am a lover of the music."

"That's funny," said the landlady. "My last lodger was connected with the stables, too!"

Strong, Forceful Men With Plenty of Iron In Their Blood—

These Are the Ones With the Power and Energy To Win

"Many a capable man or woman falls just short of winning because they don't back up their mentality with the physical strength and energy which come from having plenty of iron in the blood," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. "Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it robs him of that virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life. It may also transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable. To help make strong, keen red-blooded Americans there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron. It often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down people in two weeks' time." Nuxated Iron is now being used by over three million people annually, including such men as Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, former Secretary of the Treasury, and ex-Governor of Iowa; former United States Senator and Vice-Presidential nominee Charles A. Towne, General John L. Clem (retired), the drummer boy of Shiloh who was sergeant in the U. S. Army when only twelve years of age; also United States Judge G. W. Atkinson of the Court of Claims of Washington, and others.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron, which is recommended above, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not irritate the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. This is guaranteed by all good druggists.

We Must Furnish the Spade" — Billy Sunday

By REV. WILLIAM A. SUNDAY

Uncle Sam's Liberty war chest needs filling again!

We have the cash to fill it as many times as he lifts the lid.

There are only two horns to this dilemma—you are either a patriot or a traitor.

The men on the firing line and on the battle-ships have turned from business, home, mother, wife, children, and they stand ready to give their lives and shield with their bodies us who remain at home.

We are unworthy to be thus protected, if we do not do our utmost to sustain them.

We must be one in our determination to win this war. We are traitors to the cause for which they are giving their lives, if we do things here that make their efforts harder.

Life is not worth living unless there is something to live for. Life would not be worth living if that bunch of Heinies should win.

That is why they cannot win. That is why we cannot lose.

What a mountain of crime God has on his books against that horde of Hellish Huns. What grave is deep enough for this thousand-armed, thousand-footed, thousand-headed, thousand-horned, thousand-fanged pirate of the air, assassin of the seas, despoiler of the earth and ambassador of Hell!

The army and navy will dig the grave, but we must furnish the spade.

Our boys will soon hang crape on the door of the Potsdam Palace, and the bands will play Yankee-Doodle and Dixie along the Rhine.

Uncle Sam is the cactus in the Kaiser's pillow.

Our Boys have gone over to clean up on that fool bunch of Huns and it is up to us to supply them with whatever they need to finish the job. It takes money to keep the riveters riveting—the sawyers sawing—the machine guns spitting bullets and the grub wagon always on hand with the cats. There is nothing too good for our brave defenders.

Our vocabulary contains no words adequate to express our approval of the achievements of our government since we threw our hat in the ring. We are rich on top of the ground; we are rich under the ground and our rivers creep like silver serpents to the seas, bearing our products.

The children of England, France, Italy and Belgium are laughing once more because they are being fed from Uncle Sam's bakeshop. One carload of meat every two minutes, one hog out of every four, nine million pounds of meat a day—all going over to feed our boys. We are in this scrap to the last dollar, the last grain of wheat, the last day.

We will never stop until Germany dips her dirty blood-stained rag to the Stars and Stripes. It's a whale of a job we've tackled, but we can and must put it over.

But you must help.

Don't whine. Don't knock. You can't saw wood with a hammer. Don't turn the hose on the fire; add fuel.
